Essays by archaeologists and other specialists that summarize state of knowledge about enigmatic, pre-Hispanic culture (apogee: 1200-1450 a.d.) of northwest Chihuahua and southwestern states of Arizona and New Mexico, centered on site of Paquimé. Written by virtually every living specialist who has studied area, commentaries emphasize similarities and contrasts with contemporary cultures in region to north (Pueblo, Mogollón, Hohokam cultures) and with Mesoamerican cultures to south. Still unsettled are explanations for area's relatively rapid rise as regional power center, structure of its culture, and its sudden abandonment around 1450 a.d. Also contains brief biographies of archaeologists who dedicated time and effort (principally during second half of 20th century) to excavating and deciphering secrets of this desert culture. Texts are illustrated by careful and beautiful color photographs by Hector Jaramillo. High quality reproductions on heavy paper. $52.95h
